

MetroRide Extension

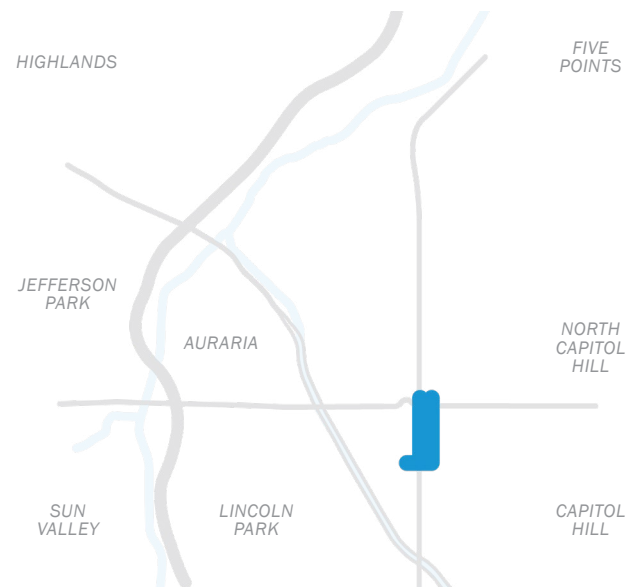

Between Civic Center Station and Golden Triangle

Extending the existing MetroRide service from Civic Center Station to the Golden Triangle would provide frequent transit service in the rapidly densifying neighborhood. The extension would connect popular cultural destinations to the downtown core.

Project Significance

The connection between the rapidly expanding Golden Triangle neighborhood, its cultural attractions, Capitol Hill, and the rest of downtown has become increasingly important since the MetroRide first began service. Completing the vision for that service allows Denver to increase mobility for residents of these neighborhoods, as well as visitors to the city.

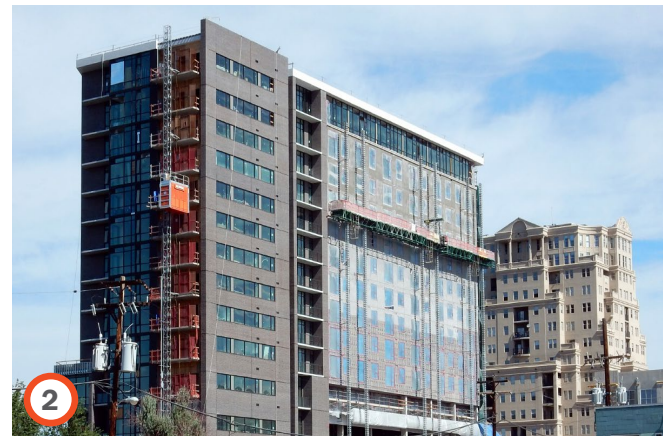

Transit and Bike Connections

Key Destinations

Denver Union Station is the starting point for the existing MetroRide Route.

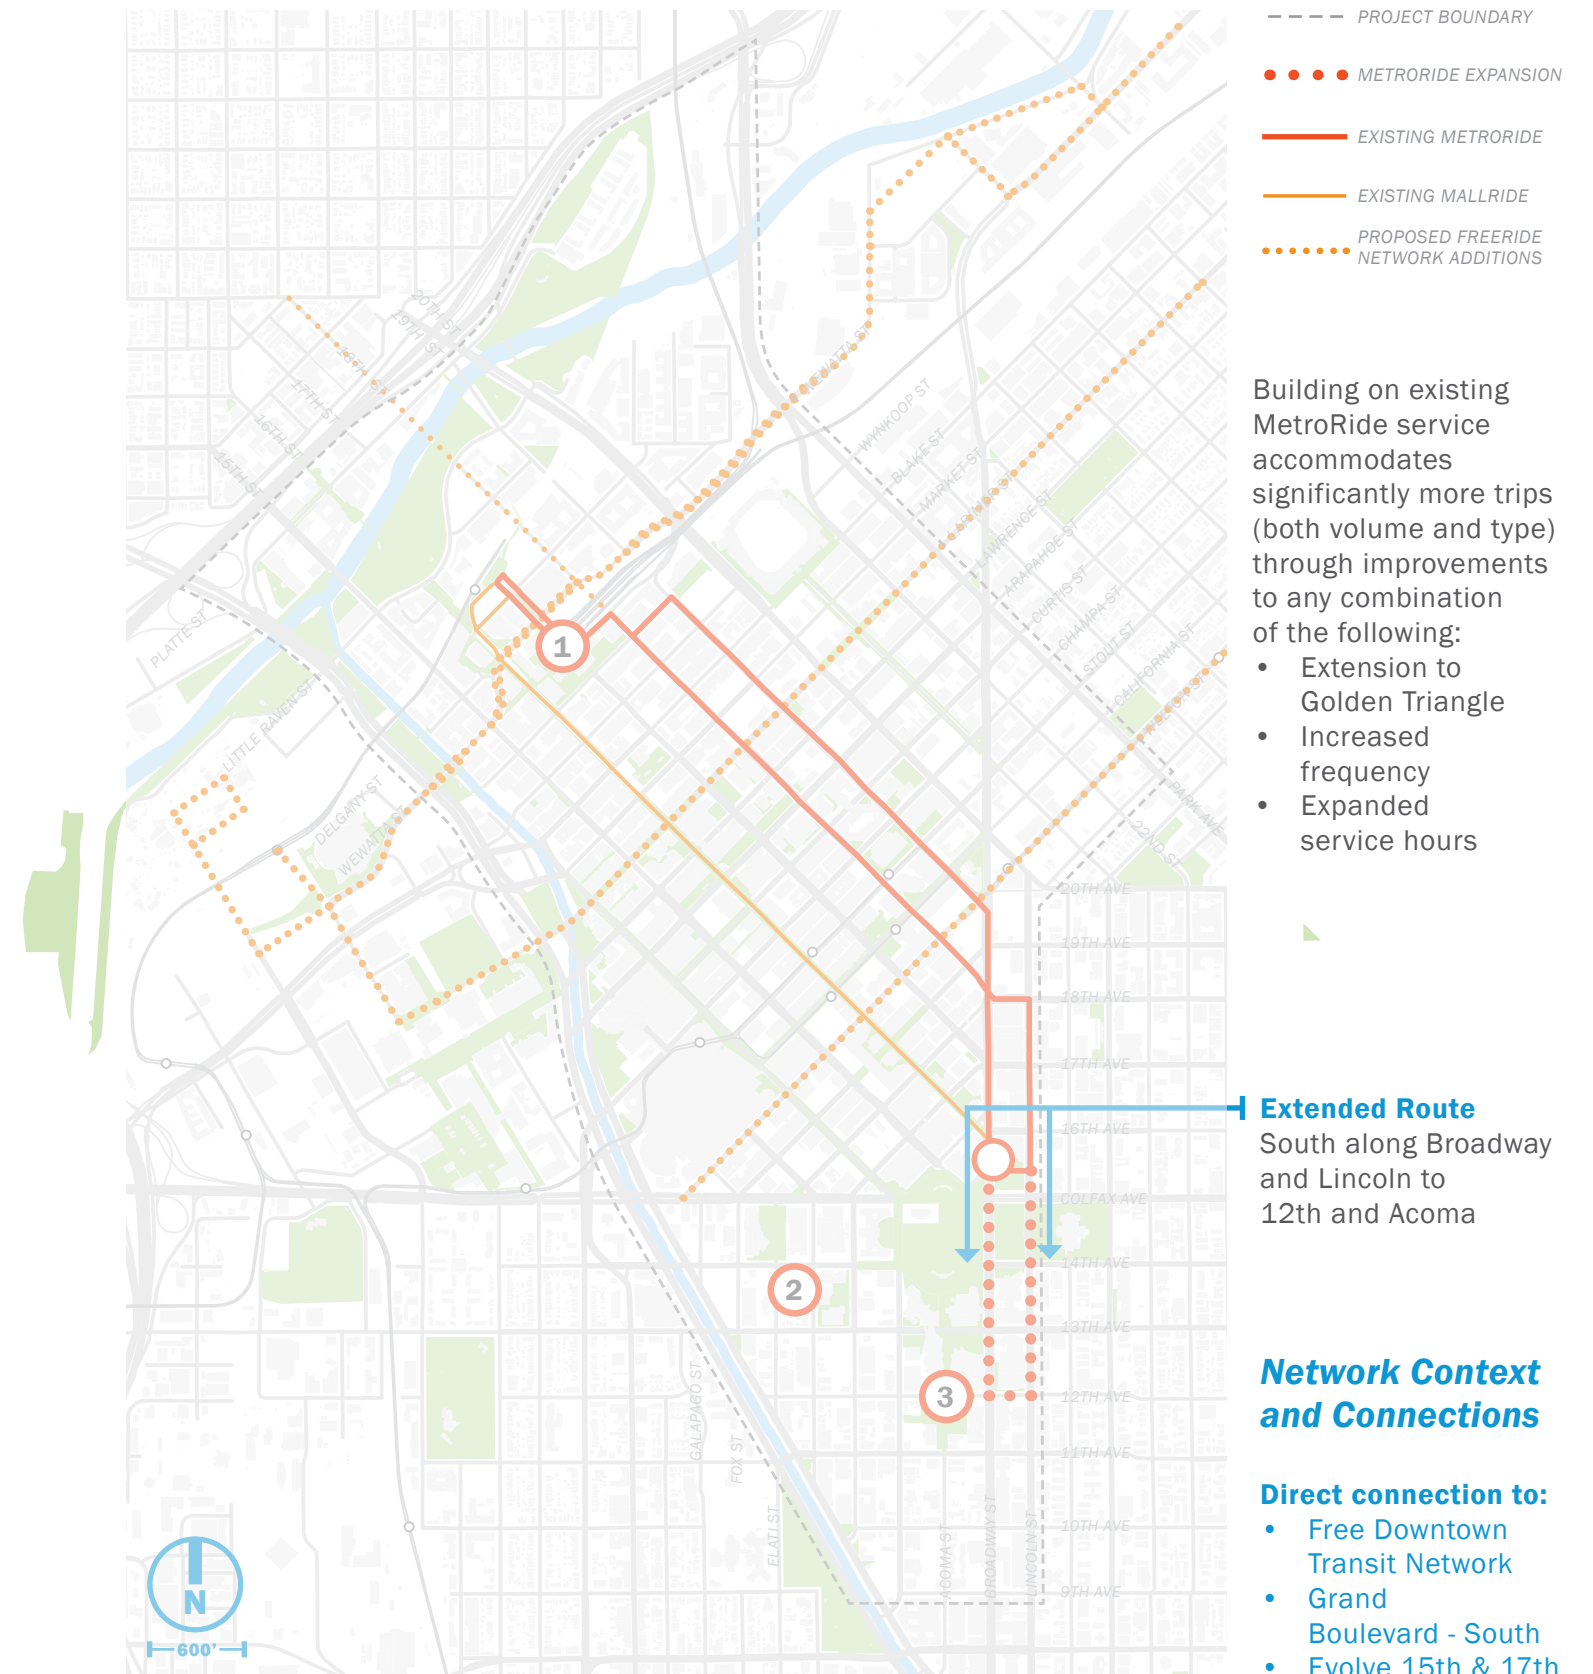

High-density residential developments are increasing in the Golden Triangle neighborhood, highlighting the need for increased mobility.

The Denver Art Museum is the heart of the Golden Triangle neighborhood and a proposed site for a new MetroRide transit stop/station.

Free Downtown Transit Network

Building on existing MetroRide service accommodates significantly more trips (both volume and type) through improvements to any combination of the following:
